Biratou, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 15.—A bloody onslaught by rebel troops who met a withering artillery and machine-gun fire at the hands of government militia along a six-mile front abutting the town of Irun was repulsed today.

Bolstering the rebel attack were two airplanes.

The battle lasted for about five hours. It constituted the heaviest and most vicious assault launched thus far in the four-week civil was by the rebels against any Bay of Biscay community in extreme north-Biscay community in e eastern Spain. The rebels retreated.

The fate of hundreds of persons not sympathetic with the Madrid Socialist regime, who had been threat-ened with death before firing squads if the rebels assaulted either San Sebastian or Irun, remained in doubt.

Socialized Finance Plank in Platform

A reply to Rev. Robert Connell. Leader of the Opposition, for his criticism of the "socialized finance" plank of the C.C.F. platform was issued by the provincial executive today.

Over the signature of Don Smith, chairman of the publicity committee, the statement reads:

chairman of the publicity committee, the statement reads:

"The C.C.F. executive wishes, in view of recent statements by the Rev. Robert Connell, to bring to the attention of the public, and particularly the electorate of Victoria, the platform on which he and other C.C.F. members were elected in the provincial election of 1933.

"Mr. Connell is today ridiculing the idea of socialized finance' in one province. He is referring to the idea as 'fantastic' and 'impracticable' and 'calculated to arouse hopes which cannot be fulfilled.' In view of this the public should know that Mr. Connell went before the electorate in 1933 on a platform which called specifically for the adoption of socialized finance inside the borders of British Columbia if circumstances required it.

"Plank two of the C.C.F. Provincial Platform of 1933, on which Mr. Connell was elected as member of Parliament for Victoria, reads as follows:

"Finance: Co-operation with the other provinces to obtain a computer socialization of all the financial representations."

The spray would not be effective protection against any or every disease that gains entry to the body via the nose. For example, Dr. Armstrong doubts very much whether it would do any good in the case of influenza. In his opinion, this disease may be contracted anywhere down the respiratory tract, from nose and throat to lungs, wherever the invading virus gets a foothold.

"I didn't just sit down and think it out," he said. "I don't believe you can ever get at a thing that way. At least, I can't."

He went on to tell how this spray, which may prove the means of conquering one of the most dreaded of modern plagues, came about as a result of quite different research. Back in 1932, Dr. Armstrong was working with smallpox vaccine virus, trying to find a way of making the "takes" less severe. His idea was to irritate the skin a little before vaccinating, to make the virus effect less severe, and among other irritants he tried picric acid. Their Excellencies

IT IS ALWAYS A PLEASURE TO US in Victoria to welcome His Majesty's representative to this Dominion. On this occasion it gives us a special delight to extend the hand of good fellowship to Baron and Lady Tweedsmuir because the Governor-General is so well known to Canadians and to British peoples everywhere by reason of the written word.

There is not sufficient room in the space here to be devoted to the welcome to the former John Buchan and his charming consort to permit of mention of the lengthy record of the Governor-General's achievements in the realm of letters and public service to his country. His career has been a distinguished one. His reading friends are legion. His "Thirty-nine Steps" -written more than two decades ago-was best seller and has thrilled millions of devotees of the sound silver screen. Those who want to know what the Governor-General has in the back of his mind when he is not writing and not doing his job as His Majesty's representative in Canada at Rideau Hall would do well to realize that his recreations include: "Fishing, deer-stalking, and mountaineering. And his clubs in the Old Land are: "Athenaeum, Alpine, Flyfishers', St. Stephen's and New Ed-

The sincerity of the welcome to Covernor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir no doubt will be abundantly apparent to them. We shall hope that their stay on Vancouver Island will be a pleasant one. If they enjoy their brief sojourn here at much as the people of this commun'y will enjoy: their presence, their visit surely Wil be pleasant.

This inaugural trip, the first to the Pacific Coast, will, we trust, be the forerunner of others. His Majesty's representative always may be sure of a warm welcome in this capital city of British Columbia.

What Will the Harvest Be?

THE MOON WILL BE GETTING big and yellow these August nights from next week on, and drifting above the silent fields it will shine down as a token of a new harvest a sign that once again man has pitted strength against the stubborn earth and forced it to give him of its plenty.

But the harvest moon has looked down on other things than ripening grain and burdened fruit trees. The human race reaped another kind of harvest, some twenty-two years ago, and almost died of it; and we never again can think of this month of August without remembering it as the most fateful of anniversaries.

The World War which then began was a war to enthrone democracy, and it left us a new kind of autocracy; it was a war to end war, and it left us wondering just how and where the next war will begin. We can not let the anniversary pass without considering anew this greatest of all the race's curses.

It was proper that the World War should That is the month when opinion is of especial interest. en reap what they have sown; and if ever there was a harvest that came directly and logically from what had been planted, it was harvest of August, 1914.

For the world before 1914 was the kind of world which, in the last analysis, always puts its trust in force. Beneath its fine phrases about civilization, friendship, and harmony, there was always the assumption that in the end the man, the group, or the nation with the most muscle would come out on top.

The plain lesson of modern science, triumphant over distance—that the human race is a unit which must last as a unit to survive—was blandly ignored.

And so the harvest moon of 1914 looked down upon an earth which shook with the thud of guns and the rolling tramp of moving armies. The blind savagery of the dark ages returned to warfare. What we know as civilization, built from the blood and toil and dreams of endless turies, came close to utter collapse. Now, half way through a new August, what is our prospect? Are we sowing the same seed that was sown before 1914? Unless we immediately find a new kind, can we possibly hope for a different sort of harvest? Unless we take the ins to build the kind of society in which war "spot" of reform?

is unlikely, can we be surprised if war comes?

We have not long to decide. It may be too late even now—for the fires in Spain, for instance, may at any moment light a torch that will not be put out. But can any thinking man fail to demand, with all the strength that is in him, that the civilized world make one final, perate effort to find the way to peace and barmony, regardless of the cost?

Monday In Quebec

QUEBEC FOR SO MANY YEARS had got itself used to the return of a Liberal government after every election that it was not until a comparatively short time ago that political prognosticators had to take cognizance of changing views. The campaign which will come to an end this evening—polling will take place on Monday—has been described as the most strenuous one urty years.

Mr. Godbout charges, on the other hand, that Mr. Duplessis is a Conservative leader seeking to gain a Conservative victory and that the Union Nationale is only camouflag Mr. Gouin's quarrel with Mr. Du

To quote this commentator again:

As for policies, Premier Godbout promises agriculture is of paramount importance to the province. Since the farmers form the ma-jority of the population, it is also important to the government that it should have their support. Hence, Mr. Godbout's programme in-cludes bonuses for clearing land, for produc-ing butter, cheese and pigs for export, for building modern piggeries, and for the beet sugar industry. There will be aid for stock breeders and for small co-operative ware-houses for farmers' goods. It is proposed to provide by legislation for a maximum of 8 per cent on first mortgages on farms.

It is to be noted, too, that Mr. Duplessis has a progressive programme also, and he par-ularly assails the "trusts." He stands for farm credit with money at 3 to 4 per cent; bonuses butter and cheese for export and other similar aids for agriculture; rural electrification and lower hydro rates for the farmers. er hydro rates for the farmers: lassification of colonist lands and an end to classification of rusts" no purchase of government supplies from the "coal trust" or the "hydro trust." Even Rockland Avenue, which once stood for the finest flower of mid-Victorian anobbery—a robust and colorful growth which flourished in this climate—many of the fine old houses that used to see us in our boy-hood, are empty today, with windows broken, gardens overgrown, all their splendor gone forever.

In this age houses get out of date almost as In this age houses get out of date almost as fast as automobiles; faster, perhaps, than wives. A while ago, a house was good for several generations and a family's, attachment for it grew through the years. Just because it didn't possess a purple-tiled bathroom or an electric refrigerator in every bedroom, people didn't yearn to get out of it. Nowadays, a house is out of date for most people in twenty years, and with the new architecture of belligerent ugliness and streamlined glass-and-concrete horror coming in, every house now standing in Víctoria will be considered untit for a civilized person's habitation within two decades at most. The trouble with most scientists is that they have overestimated the intelligence of the race, or just haven't given a darn what happened to it. But Lodge is not like the average scientist, who doesn't believe in anything he can't see under his microscope. Lodge not only explored the material ether in his search for radio and such things. He explored the regions beyond if any. He is the only great scientist who believes there are any such regions inhabited by the spirits of those who have once lived here.

This is what makes his present remorse so difficult to understand, for if, as he believes, we go on from here into a spiencid spirit world, the sooner we get there the better. The sooner modern science destroys the race in a general war, the

It is a curious fact about man, long observed, that, no matter how sure he is of immortality, or how he longs for it, he is seldom anxious to leave this unhappy world for a better one.

If Lodge had succeeded in selling spiritism to the public instead of radio, all the difficulties which appal him would disappear. If the western world at large really believed in life after death, if it were Christian, and not nazan, there would be it were Christian, and not pagan, there would be no mass slaughter for merely material objectives. They wouldn't be considered worth fighting over. The fact that they have been and will be fought over in the most barbarous fashion, and that this is everywhere accepted as natural and inevitable. shows you how much religion is in us when it comes to the test.

Those who have always considered my friend. Mr. McGeer, a wild Indian must have been disappointed when they saw him really on the war path. But out of all this cheerful controversy has lome a rather sensible suggestion. It is that Gerry should adopt the reathers, wampum, pemmican and potlatch as the tribal and official dress of the Mayor of Vancouver. It is urged that he should so attire himself when he shortly greets the Lord Mayor of London, who is coming half tway round the world to consume turtle solup with he Mayor of Vancouver.

King Bros. stated that they have helped quite a number of men who have been stranded here to return to England. In fact, men call at their office frequently about vacancies.

In conversation with them this morning they state that the Victoria morning they state that the Victoria men do not appreciate the efforts made by the firm on their behalf and that in the future any call from a ship will be filled at Vancouver. We explained to them that in our opinion this would be very unfair to the un-employed seamen here and a letter to the press should not change the good work they have been doing for the men.

WE LETTER WEDTERS

To the Editor:-When Mr. Bruce chison alludes to us as "pop-i letter-writers to the Editor," is not surprised; but when that is all he does call us, then is the time we red surprise. There are many appropriate maries he could give us. For instance, in the ex-treme fullness of our ego we seriously allude to ourselves as scientists and then in our distribes we immediately proceed to prove the absurdity of our assumption. In that, we suggest, is room for other names than "pop-eyed." There, Mr. Echtor, is at least one time when things are not that which they are said to be.

Then, again, when we try to point out to a long-sufferbing public chat there is a strong similarity between Mrs. Baker Eddy and Karl Marx, we prove our inability, as scientists, to analyze a simple proposition and leave the door wide open for Mr. Bruce Hutchison to easil us more than "FOP-EYED."

TRIBUTE FROM A PUPIL

To the Editor:—May I say a few words in favor of a flady who has my highest admiration and esteem?

It was my pleasume and privilege to be in Mrs. Havercoft's first class at Margaret Jenkins School, and I can honestly say that she was the best teacher I ever had. I am now a member of the teaching profession myself and I frankly say that she was that often in lesson preparation and in problems of discipline, I have asked myself. "What would Mrs. Havercroft have done in this case?" — and with ner cxample before me, many knotty problems have been solved.

For a number of years in Margaret Jenkins School. Mrs. Havercroft has dvery difficult classes to handle, coming to her from teachers lacking her shillty and thorougeness. Mr. Sanders accuses Dr. Telford of exercising dictatorship, although he has only been elected as leader a few weeks, and has already profered his resignation to the executive, if by taking that step the present crisis could be averted—something new and strange surely in the history of dictatorships.

Mr. Winch also withdrew voluntarily from the "secret meeting" in order that his influence might not in any way affect the ruling of the more moderate members of the exemple.

As for the Editor.—A short time ago a short letter appeared on this subject which the writer has thought of ever since—the crying necessity of untilty land with the mainland for defence purposes.

R. T. Williams lived with his mind set on this and passed away with his dream unrealized. He put up a desperate fight when there was danger of that great natural provides. Ripple Rock, being blasted away. Too bad he has passed from among us, for I think it will be realized now, when safety and trade and life are to be reckoned with, rather than a select island and surroundings for those few who would keep it select. MARGARET BUSBY. A POET VALUES BEAUTIFUL SPEECH

To the Editor:—Next Sunday I am leaving Victoria for an extensive lecture tour through the prairie provinces and I would like before I go just to say one word in regard to the importance of teaching children the value of beautiful speech. Before taking this wonderful course I was companied. I was conscious of a great lack in my presentation of poetry (there are still many things lacking), but I knew my voice was flat and without tone or color and I wasn't just sure how long I could go on talking without getting husky and throaty. I was keenly aware of all the deficiencies in my platform manner and speech and didn't know how to help myself.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today

August 15, 1911 (From The Times Files)

That stalwart Liberal section of the city, Ward Two, is in the forefront of the present election fight. A gathering of the old-time workers and the younger-men assembled in the Liberal rooms last night and elected P.

Chief Davis has received a cheque for $25 from the municipality of Saanich as an appreciation of the services of the Victoria fire brigade at a fire which recently destroyed a house in Cloverdale. The money goes into the firemen's fund.

The track for the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway has now been laid as far as Alberni yard, the finishing rails having been put down Saturday night. When the ballasting is completed the line will be ready for the run right through to Alberni.

While Victoria's waterfront is at present rather dull, at Esquimalt harbor things are extremely busy and the B.C. Marine railway yards are a hive of industry. All the wharfage space there is occupied by steamers.

The representatives of Oak Bay municipality and the City of Victoria met last night at Oak Bay school-house and amicably patched up their differences in regard to the main sewer which is to run_through the municipality to Mary Todd Island

The engagement is announced between Charles Robert Fitzmaurice Piers of Victoria, only son of Sir Charles Piers, Bt., and Lady Piers, and Ann, only daughter of Mrs. Ferguson, North Vancouver, B.C., and the late Capt. Thomas Ferguson, The Black Watch (6th Royal Highlanders).

TAKES DARE AND WINS!

Chicago Woman, Forced Up to Five by Partner, Backs Slam Bid by Expert Playing

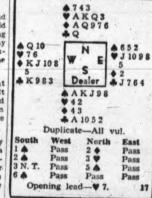

By WM. E. MCKENNEY

By WM. E. McKENNEY
In the realm of childhood, it is considered contemptible to refuse to take a dare. In the bridge world, the bid of five in a major suit usually is construed as a dare to bid six, and it generally results as expected.
It is all right to accept such dares but if you do, it often requires careful planning to bring about the slam trick.

the club queen and won with the ace

Now a low space to the ten by West was significant. If East held fobr originally to the queen, then the hand could not be made, anyway.

However, the diamond finesse now had to be tried. When it won, dummy's last spade was led and the king played by Mrs. Lewis, dropping West's queen. Another round of spades was taken.

Now one of the losing clubs could safely be discarded on the queen of hearts.

An attempt to ruff out all the clubs or a slip in the timing of the early plays, would have meant disaster.

To Marry Victorian

By MARIAN YOUNG

New York, Aug. 15.—"Women should learn to swish!"

From Nina Price, who has swished herself right into the profession of fashion consultant and turns ugly ducklings into birds of paradise, comes this counsel. Swishing, says Mrs. Price, is rule No. 1 for chic.

"If she doesn't swish, she doesn't carry her clothes well," Mrs. Price insists. "The best way to go about mastering the art is to cast off all the so-called comfortable, mannish lounging pyjamas, unfitted, kneelength bathrobes (leftovers from college days) and, in their place, substitute house coats and hostess gowns.

"The non-swisher slumps in the Chicago, Aug. 15 (Associated Press)—Ars Nana Karpavicz, fifty-eight, mother of the convicted kidnapper, Alvin Karpis. has filed suit in the supreme court against Time, incorporated, publishers of a weekly news magazine, for $100,000 damages. She charged she was libelled in an article published May 4, 1936.

Gem experts recognize five different shades of green in emeralds.

Inwardly Boots writhed at her mother's trust in her. Not, as she reminded herself, that she had done anything to be ashamed of. On the contrary, her journeyings with Russ had been of the most decorous nature. A ride in the sweet smelling lanes . . . a chocolate soda at the Sweet Shop . . but would people believe that? A girl didn't usually spend, so much time with one man unless the current of their affairs ran more deeply and swiftly than that of a platonic friendship. But it had been platonic, Boots told herself sturdily. After that first impulsive kiss weeks ago Russ had not laid a finger upon her. The memory of that kiss stayed with her . "What did you say, darling?" Her mother, straightening a stooped back, lifting out a pile of underthings layered in tissue paper, looked at her fondly, "Nothing!" But the sound that had , "Nothing!" But the sound that had simple. "If she finds out about my resigning from the Juniors I'm simply through." Boots muttered to herself darkly, tossing on a hot pillow. And of course that revelation was only a matter of time.

Sleep would not come. It was all wrong, the girl thought desperately, tossing in the darkness. Everything was wrong—her life here, the narrowness and stupidity of it, the restrictions that bound her. With Russ—and here her heart leaped—everything would be different. He belonged to a different world. He was not bound by age-old taboos and conventions. Maybe that was the way life was meant to be, free and bold and simple. As his wife she would miss some of the softness and ease she had been trained to expect. Vaga-bonding down the world in grysy fashion one would some to the better. fashion one would come to think of hot baths and clean sheets and finger bowls as the greatest luxuries, pleasant but not vital.

the gate which led into the Hartses garden. It was only a short walf from here to the blue stretch of the sound. Her head ached. She wanted to be alone—to shake off the dark thoughts of the night.

"I ought to do this more often." she told herself, striding down the empty path to the water. It was good to be alone in a quiet world, to think things out for oneself without the barrier of four walls.

But the mood of exultation quickly passed. She was, after all, little more

Suddenly she put her shining fair head down into her hands and wept. "I don't know what to do," she sobbed. "If someone would only tell me what to do!"

"A job, darling!" Her mother smiled indulgently. "What could you do?" "Well, Mary Oilivant is helping out in a dress shop in New Martin and she loves it." And some of the other girls—Helen and Louise and Sue—are going to take a business course." "But, my dear." began her mother in the tone, the strain Boots so dreaded, "after all they are new-comers here. They have no traditions It seemed to her that every place she looked she met an impasse. She had staved off thinking of the inevi-table scene which would ensue when her mother learned of the bitter snub comers here. They have no traditions to uphold. "We've never had enough, really,"
Boots thought angrily, almost scornfully. And it was no use saying

The cultivated voice startled her. Looking up, touching her reddened eyes with a handkerchief, she stared straight at the tall dark young man she had met at Lois Hart's house Denis Fenway.

Japan, they have admitted privately, seeks to render China impotent to eliminate her as a possible adversary in any future war—and to prevent possible aid to Soviet Russia in the event of a Russo-Japanese war.

Inner Mongolia, nominally part of China lying between China proper and Soviet Russia, must be made a strong and stable state, the Japanese assert. That aim is advanced as reason for the Japanese military mission to inner Mongolia to advise its ruler, Prince Teh Wang.

URGE CARE OF MENTAL CASES

Communities Need Better Provisions For Treatment, Says Dr. W. L. Russell

The time has arrived when every ommunity should undertake the making of better provision for treatment of mental disorders in view of their vital significance to health and happiness, in the opinion of Dr. William L. Russell, professor emeritus of psychiatry at Cornell University and general director of psychiatry at the general director of psychiatry at the New York Hospital

Dr. Russell, who is a member of the board of directors of the international committee for mental hygiene which will hold an international congress in Paris next year, is visiting Victoria for a month, staying with his sisters, Misses Alex and Alma Russell, and his brother, Fred Russell, at 27 Boyd

When one considered the prevalence of mental disorders one wondered why the provisions for treating them were so interior to those for other forms of illness, Dr. Russell said.

Psychiatry was taking a higher place in the medical world and it was now generally realized that it was now generally realized that it was not merely a medical specialty but form of medical thought and practice form of medical thought and practice that should have a place in the study and treatment of an flipsess, he said. Hope for the future lies in early treatment, Dr. Russell said. There ust be an understanding of the nature of the problem and the steps which must be taken towards preven tion, he urged.

He dealt also with the establishment of clinics, many of which moved from place to place, for prevention work.

UNCLE WIGGILY'S LUCKY PENNY

By HOWARD R, GARIS

Uncle Wiggliy was on his way home from the store one afternoon when he saw a most curious sight. Ahead of him in the road were two wagons, and each wagon had a covering over it, something like the word of the country in the rairies of this country iong ago. They are and siept in them, you know.

Of course the wagons Uncle Wiggliy saw were small ones, such as small animals would travel in, but they were just like those others. A big dog was pulling each one, and other dogs ran alongside.

"Uncle Wiggliy wondered. "I'm going to 'Jind out!"

So he hopped along fast and when he came to the wagon he called: 'Hello, there! What's going on?'

"We're going on!" one of the dogs laughed. "We're gypsies! And we travel from one place to another in search of adventure."

One of the curses of the modern woman is that she wants too much One of the curses of the modern woman is that she wants too much. She wants all that the domestic woman has and all that the career woman has, and in trying to get everything she only too often loses what she has. For, unfortunately, it is an impossibility for a woman to give her thoughts, her-strength, her energy, her enthusiasm, her time to both her home and her job. One or the other must monopolize her. And in consequence the

If a man is able to support his family in comfort, he naturally expects his wife to stay in his home and make it a happy one for him and his children instead of it being just a house. He expects her to meet him in the evening with a glad smile instead of being off lecturing, or seeing patients, or coming home from the store or office too tirred to even talk. He expects her to be with the children, watch over and guide them. instead of turning over their rearing to hirelings. He expects her to give her family the very best that is in her to give.

And, similarly, if an employer is paying a woman a good salary for doing some specific work, he expects her to give to her job the very best that is in her to give. He expects her to be on time in the morning, no matter if she has been up half the night with a sick baby. He expects her to constant the state of the state of her brain to safe has been up han the night with a sick budy. Every working girl hopes and expects to marry. Most of them do. Some are domestic by nature and are satisfied just to become homemakers, but there are a vast number of girls who are totally unfitted for marriage by their business experience.

They miss the excitement of dolling themselves up and going downtown to business every day. They miss the order and the routine of a store or office. They miss the thrill of seeing people coming and going continually. They miss particularly having their own money that they can spend as they

And no doubt she expressed the feelings of thousands of other women who have married and who want to live both their old lives and their new lives. The only trouble is it can't be done.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX-I am a boy seventeen years old and I am in des because I have a receding chin, as this is an evidence of weakness, mentally and physically. I am also undersized, but my grade-school record shows that I have led my class for five years. Yet on account of my physical makeup I feel it is useless to try to develop myself. I have wept and brooded over this until I am almost an insane wreck.

ADAM.

Answer-Brace up, Adam, and put out your chin instead of drawing it in. If you have nothing more to complain of than not having a chin that sticks out like the prow of a battleship, you are in luck.

So far as I am concerned, I've seen too many people's characters belie their physical make-up to put the slightest belief in the kind of features nature wished on them—or the bumps on their heads. One of the shrewdest, leverest men I know has a face as round and as expr cheese, and dull, sleepy-looking eyes

You would just pick him out to sell gold bricks to in any crowd, yet he can come nearer to seeing through a-millstone than any one I have ever met, and Heaven help those he trades with! On the other hand, I know a man with an intellectual cast of countenance who is virtually a moron. While as for criminals, generally the most benign-looking man at a murder trial is nearly always the prisoner. After we get old, after life has carved its story on our faces, after have thought good thoughts or bad, after we have been kind or cruel, our characters show in our faces. But when we are young, whether we have a straight nose or a turned-up one, whether we have a little chin or a big one, doesn't give the slightest intimation of whether we are weak or strong, or whether we will be successes or failures in life.

It is our brains that count, and, if you have led your class for five years, you needn't worry because you lack chin. You've got what it takes. (Copyright, 1936)

Mrs. G. M. Havercroft Will Continue on City School Staff

Mrs. G. M. Havercroft, teacher around whom a controversy has been waged in school board circles, will resume her teaching duties at the beginning of next month if she desires.

chairman of the board, drew attention to the fact that Mrs. Havercroft hat been guilty of insubordination in refusing to conduct a class in folk dancing in the presence of Major Hinton. If such action was repeated by the teacher, the whole case would be raised again, the chairman said. NERVOUS STRAIN

Trustee Mrs. D. L. MacLaurin ex-pressed the view that Mrs. Havercroft had intended no open act of insub-ordination, but had reacted under a nervous strain.

Wednesday evening's meeting of the board, George Deane, municipal inspector, reported the insubordina-tion incident had been taken into consideration when it was found necessary to have certain members of the teaching staff take leave of absence owing to shrinkage in school attendance.

Yesterday evening he told the board
the decision to give Bank Street school a fourth grade would permit re-absorption of one teacher from the ranks of seven who had been given the six months' leave. The statement did not mean Mrs. Havercroft would be moved to Bank Street IMPARTIAL REVIEW

Trustee Moresby gave an impartial review of the incident from which the charge of insubordination had arisen. He referred to the excellent record of Mrs. Havercroft with the one exceptional incident. Reports indicated Major Hinton had also been efficient.

The chairman considered the remarks made by Major Hinton to the students of Mrs. Havercroft on one occasion very unwise. He expressed the view they had caused deep resentment and had resulted in Mrs. Havercroft experiencing a feeling of repulsion in Major Hinton's presence. She had, however, done wrong in refusing to take the folk dancing class when instructed to conduct it by Mr. Deane. But he thought there The chairman considered the re-class when instructed to conduct it by Mr. Deane. But he thought there was some palliation due her. He then brought in a resolution to have her leave of absence rescinded so that sh might resume teaching in September Trustee Mrs. MacLaurin reviewed

Mrs. Havercroft's charges against Major Hinton in two lights. She saw first a strong personal resentment against him on the part of the teacher.

Secondly she referred to Mrs. Haver-croft's strong statements charging:

Major Hinton with inefficiency and stating she and other teachers re-garded his work "as a joke." There must be some reason for that and the petition from Margaret Jenkins School Undoubtedly the survey would surround the question of a junior high school, Trustee Moresby continued He remarked upon the truth of Trustee Mrs. MacLaurin's statement that a junior high school might require a special and different building from any the board had, that it would entail centralization of students and the consequent evacuation of part of existing grade schools and would raise the problem of filling them up.

"These are some of the incidental features. Are they not purely local?" he asked. An outside man would scarcely be able to give full consideration to local conditions, he said. Gold Digging!

A certain rich man, retired from business, bought a splendid property, and began to play golf. He had worked hard from childhood, so, of course, as a golfer he wore no medals, but, on the other hand, his tips to the caddles were very generous.

A colored cotton picker lost his job and was taken on at the golf club and the first person he caddled for was the rich New Yorker. The round was a long one, and at the end the New Yorker tipped with his usual generosity. The caddic chuckled for Joy. Then he said: "You's mighty kind, boss. Will you

The shackled dog was first sighted by Engineer L. G. Miller, who applied the brakes of his inbound train, but was unable to stop. The dog somewas unable to stop. The dog some-how managed to escape the wheels of the locomotive, and Miller scribbled a note and handed to a passing train. The crew of the other train stopped and released the animal.

The dog was fastened by a metal chain, wired to the rail.

TRIO IN ONE

From a Correspondent

H. G. Wells might call it "The Or-chestra of the Future" and would be right. Anyway, it would be an apt name for the "Electronic Trio," right. Anyway, it would be an apt name for the "Electronic Trio," which is an electric organ, easily played.

It consists of a stringless 'cello manoeuvred without a bow; as probated yesterday at £86,000 ($430,000).

He left practically all of it to his theremin that responds to air waves servary and life-long friend George.

played.

It consists of a stringless 'cello manoeuvred without a bow; a theremin that responds to air waves and an invisible violin. It may be daft but it is also economical. For it produces chamber music without being touched by human hands. It welve years and Browning aught him to use his left hand. Baumann was eighty; Browning is over seventy.

PLAY AT EMPRESS

"That gift is a largeness of soul. "That gift is a largeness of soul, which unconsciously, in expressing the music of the great masters, finds expression of its own inward grace." So writes the critic for The Toronto Globe, and continuing, he says: "The whole of his Beethoven was glorious; he played it with a superbauthority, a profound insight, his authority, a profound insight; his interpretation had inherent in its strength a tenderness, which often-times an artist of less spiritual quality than Viggo Kihi misses. It was inexpressibly beautiful. In his Chopin, with a presentation of marvellous contrasts, the artist plumbe depths almost beyond expectation in Chopin. He made the Scherzo sparkle like crisp wavelets of a sunlit summer sea, while the Largo was sheer glorious beauty that was breath-taking."

Canadian Press Winnipeg, Aug. 15 .- Recovering were important factors, wheat ment and export buying uncovered at the low point to close % lower to ¼ higher on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

October finished at 100%, December, 9914 to 99%, and May 1.01.

Export business was placed at 500,000 bushels. With trading showing the usual Saturday duliness, values went into an early decline on lack of buying power and disappoint-ing action at Liverpool. In cash wheat, demand fer all grades continued good. Spreads improved.

prices were up about a cent from the day's low points. Previous sellers both of wheat and corn made haste to reverse their market position, and ound offerings relatively meager.
World carryover reserve stocks of wheat were estimated at 440,000.000 bushels, against 589,000,000 a year ago

—a reduction of 149,000,000 bushels.
Wheat closed nervous, ½ to 1½ above yesterday's finish, September 111¼ to 111%, December 111; corn 1/2 to 1/2 advanced, September 108 to 10814. December 9514 to 95%: oats unchanged to % higher

"Sunshine" School

AN ENTIRELY new type of school, which will include babies' restrooms, south aspect for all class-rooms, gardens for pupils, a cinema and a lift, is to be built by the London County Council education components.

The design for the school is the work of a London architect in private practice. It is estimated that the whole building will cost about £38,000 —which, it is claimed, does not ex-ceed the normal for a school of such organization. The school is to be ected in Camberwell.

The plans are for a two-story building, with a part third-story. There will be accommodation for 270 infants, 264 junior girls, and 264 junior with eighty-eight boys, together with eighty places for craft work. Points from the plan are: Two babies' cooms with rest-and babies' cloak room. Medical inspection room, with wait-ing-room and bath.

side being devoted entirely to corri-air playground.

The bables' rest-rooms, will be equipped with beds where children requiring more rest than others may remain undisturbed while their col-

given a small plot of ground under its own control "for the cultivation of flowers and vegetables, thus fos-tering its love of nature and its pride tering its love of nature and its price in having some personal possession to look after."

The last words are incidentally straight from the mouth of a spokes-man from London's so-called Socialist and anti-capitalist county council.

WEEKLY MARKET REVIEWS

Canadian Press
Toronto, Aug. 15.—The slow decline in the price average of the gold stocks that has prevailed since July 27 speeded up a little this week, causing a drop of four points in the exchange index from 146.10 to 142.06.

Turkey Reoccupies Its Straits

A historic moment for Turkey was this, as her troops stood at attention on the shores of the Dardanelles while her flag fluttered once more over the Stratts, control of which was restored to Turkey at the recent Montrenx conference. Permitted to refortify the Dardanelles, which has been demilitarized since the Armistice by the Treaty of Lausanne, Turkey has appropriated $4,000,000 to rush through a rearmament programme.

Girl In Baby Mixup Of Seventeen Years Ago Decides Another Couple Are Parents

A sensational baby mixup of seventeen years ago took a dramatic turn when Louise Madeline Pittman, pretty seventeen-year-old Macon, Ga., girl, swapped families and names by choosing Mr. and Mrs. John C. Garner as her parents instead of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Pittman. She had been awarded to the Pittmans by court in 1920 and with them had grown to young womanhood. Smilingly happy, though sorry for the Pittmans Louise Madeline is shown above at left as she reached the decision which the court said she should make when old enough to know her mind. At right she is pictured with the three grown Garner girls, who, she has decided, are her sisters, Left to right; Cecil (Mrs. Frank D. Hensley), Louise Madelipe, Virgina, and Edna (Mrs. Ray Manning).

These early pictures throw an interesting sidelight on the baby mixup which occurred in an Atlanta hospital in May, 1919, when Mrs. Garber and Mrs. Pittman gave birth to girl babies on successive days. Confusion in the metal identification discs caused the Garbers to insist they had been given the wrong baby. At the left, Mrs. Garber holds the "unclaimed baby," which died at the age of eight months. At fight, Mrs. Pittman is shown with baby Louise Madelines. The Pittmans were given custody in the fall of 1920. In the centre photo are the Garbers other three daughters, Edna, Virginia and Cecil, as they appeared in 1920. Saddened by Louise Madeline's decision, the Pittmans held to the belief that she would return to them

Derricks Reach Oklahoma Capitol

The march of the oil derricks goes on in Oklahoma City. Several of them, as pictured above, are springing up on state-owned property surrounding the capitol, latest step in the long controversy between city and state. Anxious to preserve the beauty of its capitol grounds, the city had forbidden such drilling, though private operators were permitted to drill nearby. Maintaining that the state should have the benefit of oil it owns, and that companies operating adjoining wells might drain state pools by drilling at an angle, state officials have fought for the right to sink wells on this property.

Art Of The Dance-A Human Arch

The action, agility, and grace of an adaglo dance, one of the features that entertained visitors at Cleveland's Great Lakes Exposition, all were captured in this striking photograph, taken from an unusual angle. Snapped by Margaret Bourke-White just as the performers, with muscles corded and bodies supple, formed a human arch, this act was viewed by throngs at the exposition's Marine Theatre

George S. McTavish, One of the Country's Pioneers Who Has Lots of Experiences on Which to Look

Seventy-four years ago George Simpson McTavish was born in Rupertsland. When he was four he was sent to the Orkney Islands to school. By the time he was fourteen he had made three trans-Atlantic voyages in sailing ships and not until he was twenty-six did he see anything of civiliza-

Now Mr. McTavish says he feels younger than he did when fifteen. He lives in a lovely home on Lampson Street, surrounded by the treasures he picked up over many years in the northland and when he took a trip through Europe with his wife some years ago. He is one of the happiest men in Victoria. He specializes in philosophy and a half hour's chat with him is bound to make any man feel better. The son of an official of the Hudson's Bay Company, Mr. McTavlsh was born at Albany, in Rupertsland, not far from Moose Factory. He says today he is a man without a country, for Rupertsland was under British rule in those days and had thing to do with Canada.

He went to school at Stromness in the Orkney Islands, in a little old one schoolhouse which was erected y public subscription in 1789. When he was last in Europe he and his wife went and had a look at the old

After he finished school Mr. Mc ravish took passage on the bark Prince of Wales, and sailed northern seas to Hudson Bay. He spent six months on her and when he returned to Stromness he refused to go to school. So he found himself a tob in a lawyer's office in Strom where he remained for six months.

In 1879 he sailed on the Ocean Nymph for York Factory and there started his service with the Hudson's Bay Company, following in his father's

But from then, until 1913, when he came to Victoria, Mr. McTavish had never ment.

All his life he had dressed in the garb of the northiand. He loved the life up there, the freedom, the lonely trails and the good company of cided men. He kept to the north for several years and in 1892 left the company to join the B.C. Canning Company. He remained there many years. Just after the war he formed his own cannery at Rivers Inlet.

Mr. McTavish is the living proof that a person who has not too easy a life when young is much happter when along in years. How Russians Arrange Money and Finance in "Non-capitalist" State

As There is, as yet, no other system of government in the world like that of the U.S.S.R., a book about the way the Soviets arrange their finance is of more than ordinary interest. L. E. Hubbard, in "Soviet Money and Finance" (MacMillan), attempts to describe just how the Soviets manage things, It is a great effort, Mr. Hubbard has lived for many years in me-war Russia, And for many years he has studied the economic system of the Soviets.

"The most that can be said at the moment," he writes, "is that a national economic structure based on socialism and planning has proved capable of existence; whether it will ever prove more efficient, more equitable and intrinsically an improvement on economic systems based on private ownership and enterprise remains to be seen."

Meanwhile, there are already compromises with capitalist principles. The path traveled by the rouble since the beginning of 1935, Mr. Hubbard points own, has "shown a remarkable convergence towards orthodox capitalist principles."

"Even as politically the Soviet government is visibly tending to become more democratic as the younger dictatorships become more despotic," he adds, "so Soviet economic theory may soon become considered reactionary by the advanced advocates of social credit schemes and the manipulation of credit in western countries."

There are chapters in this book of such general interest as "The Evolution of Money Under Socialism": "Organization of Industrial Administration": "The Theory of Financial Plannias": "The Theory of Financial Plannias": "The Theory of Financial Planning": "The Soviet Banking System": "A Planned Currency"; and "Foreign Trade": chapters that should repay the

College Town Tale

His story deals with a university town in North His story deals with a university town in North Carolina, and it tells of a great many people—a doctor, a newspaper owner, divers professors, a girl in a beauty shop, a minister, some students, and so on, And all these people somehow come out of the pages and take on reality, which is a trick precious few of our smart young novelists can quite manage.

The book is chiefly concerned with a hot-headed young instructor in the university Eng-lish department; an intense youth who was born to tilt at windmills and who never has to hunt

A student writes for the university magazine a story which, being somewhat in the Erskine Caldwell vein, shocks the daylights out of town and gown alike. Then, as if that were not enough, it is learned that the student has colored blood.

Our young instructor rides for this windmill with fine fervor, takes up the cudgels for the offending atudent, and very nearly gets himself ridden out of town on a rail.

But just as he seems to have ruined his career irretrievably, his wife becomes critically ill; and then the warm sympathy of town and university comes to his aid, the business of the student is forgotten, and before he knows it the instructor's woes are settled—lilojically, but satisfactorily. woes are settled-illogically, but satisfactorily, It all makes first-rate res

Judges Name Novel To Represent Canada In All-nations Contest

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, Toronto, sponsoring the All-Nations Novel Competition in Canada for Farrar & Rinehart, announces that the entries in the Caffadian section of the competition have now been judged, with the result that Roderick Stuart Kennedy's novel, "The Road South," will represent Canada before the international judges, Mr. Kennedy is a Montrealer, and his short stories have been appearing in Canadian and American magazines for some years.

Very close behind "The Road South" came Charles M. Haie's "Destiny Island," with Michael Devine's "Youth in Waiting" third. It was from these three novels that the judge, Professor J. P. Macdonald of Toronto made his final selection.

Publishers in the thirteen principal bookproducing countries of the world are co-operating in this comfetition to offer prizes which have a minimum value of about $19,000. The best novel in each participating country is being chosen by minimum value of about $19,000. The best novel in each participating country is being chosen by local judges first, and these thirteen "best" novels will then go to London to the international board of judges for choice of the final winner. The board include Johan Bojer, Dr. Rudolph G. Binding, Joseph Wood Krutch, Gaston Rageot and Hugh Walpole.

The American contender will be John T. McIntyre's "Steps Going Down," and is more fortunate than the Canadian book, inasmuch as there is a $4,000 prize offered for the American winner in the event that it does not win the international prize. Mr. McIntyre is a Philadelphian and the author of many short stories, novels and plays.

Woman Tennis Star Tells Her Story

KIPLING'S lines:

"If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster and treat these two Impostors just the same . ." appear on the title-page of the autobiography of Helen Hull Jacobs, "Beyond the Game"; and they also appear, on a wooden plaque, above the entrance to the centre court at Wimbledon. In the view of Miss Jacobs, they "sum up more poignantly than any I have ever seen of heard the especial ideals of the game". especial ideals of the game."

especial ideals of the game."

Lawn tennis is a very serious, if not exactly a "poignant" business; to none more than the "stars" that shine at Wimbledon and other great centres of tennis attraction. This book treats the whole subject with suitable gravity.

The keener followers of the game will derive a lot of satisfaction from it. And the atmosphere is all very exclusive, very aristocratic.

One of the best things in the book is an account of a match in the national mixed doubles at Boston.

Miss Jacobs had been, she confesses, commit-ting "awful tactical errors." Her partner was George Lotty "Pinally." we read, "when he was serving and I was standing at what I considered was the net, he reached the end of his rope. He paused, put his hands on his hips and shook his head violently at me as he hissed. Damn it, will you get up to the net: "

That is pretty strong language in the best tennis circles.

Miss Jacobs is not the shy type; she tells us that she finds it far easier to concentrate on a stadium than on an outside court as the "un-divided attention of the spectators stimulates my ambition to win." But she admits that one of her orst moments was when she appeared for the first time in shorts. "I have never," she writes, "had a more nervewracking walk than I did from the marquee to court number two that afternoon." She mentions that it was "Bunny" Austin who was responsible for her introducing shorts for women at Wimbledon. Somewhat cryptically, she writes, he "provoked me to wearing them by his elaborate explanation of the advantage they gave a player."

Miss Jacobs has something to say about what she calls "the maladorous comments directed at pure amateurism."

pure amateurism."

"No amateur," she declares, "has ever been able to make money at amateur tennis except by writing upon it. In rare cases an amateur, writing well and prolifically, makes a fair income, but that income only accrues to him during the tennis season and must be apread over the entire year. To enumerate the expenses of playing amateur tennis, which this income must cover, would require more space than I can give it."

Only 15,000,000 Labor For Living; Statistics Reveal Conditions

THERE are not quite 15,000,000 men who work for their living in Great Britain; most of them employed in industrial production. Nearly half the women who work are engaged in one of two kinds of labor: domestic service and commerce (or finance). More women than men are employed in the textile and clothing

Only one woman in ten was "gainfully pied" in 1931. Eighty-five per cent of omen workers that year were unmarried.

By the year 1961, there will, if birth and death rates go on as they are now, be twice as many people over the age of sixty-five—and a decrease in the numbers of women between the ages of fifteen and forty-five (the biologically important section of the population) by about 25 per cent.

By that time, too, there will be about half e present number of children under fifteen. Great Britain, it seems, will become a land of old men and old women within twenty-five years

These are some of the things to be discovered from "The Home Market" (Allen & Unwin), a handbooks of statistics enlivened by pretty colored diagrams, maps, charts and other attractive il-

Inca Empire Gave Complete Security: Its Paternalism Told

IF YOU have a prejudice against the historical "costume novel," do not let it keep you from Blair Niles's "Day of Immense Sun" (Bobbs-Merrill). If you do, you will be missing something good.

Mrs. Niles writes of the ancient Inca empire of Peru, spinning a yarn about the people of that land whose world was overturned by the arrival of Pizarro and his conquistadores.

She has a knack for taking-bizarre and faraway people and making them sound real. Her ancient Indians are believable; they appeal to your sympathies. You follow the fortunes of the shepherd lad and the Virgin of the Sun with as much interest as you would give to any pair of lovers in a story of modern Manhattan.

Aside from the tale of these lovers, however, the book is interesting for its portrayal of the

Aside from the take of these lovers, however, the book is interesting for its portrayal of the Inca empire—the most remarkable experiment in paternalistic government probably, in the world's history.

The citizen's home, wife, and job were picked for him by his government. What made him put up with this system was the fact that, though they were picked, they were also guaranteed. The citizen never went jobless or hungry. He had perfect security, from birth to death, as no one else has ever had it before or since.

A queer, queer nation, this, existing on a high level of civilization without money, without unemployment, without hunger, and without crime.

The Spaniards speedily smashed it to bits and roduced all those "blessings": Mrs. Niles shows

Magic of Old Egypt, Pyramids and Snakes Too Much for Him

THERE seems to be something about the mysteries of ancient Egypt that makes writers go gags. The dark shadows of those tall-columned temples along the Nile must have a power to make men think that they have laid hands on the rod of Aaron and Moses.

Anyway, we are presented currently with "A Search in Secret Egypt," by Paul Brunton (Dutton), and it is about as completely off-centre a farrage of mysticism and miracles as you would care to read.

Mr. Brunton poked about in Egypt for quite a while and had some odd everying the complete and the second control of the co

Mr. Brunton poked about in Egypt for quite a while and had some odd experiences. He spent a night in the crypts of the great pyramid of Cheops, and there, he says, he fell into a trance, his spirit reamed out beyond the borders of the physical world, and he becomes almost as bemused as Bottom, the Weaver, in trying to tell what he saw. He fell in with an aged native who claimed to be an adept in the magical lore of the ancients, and learned that the hillside graves of the desert contain the bodies of old-time magicians who have been entranced for 5.000 years and will some day come forth to redeem the world.

He sold himself on the idea that Egypt was settled from the lost Atlantis, and that her civilization runs back for 90.000 years.

Between times, he met a fakir who could punch knives and knitting needles into himself without feeling pain, and who could be buried allive without harm. He chummed with a snake charmer and learned a mystic word that would tame cobras and stop scorpions in their tracks. He discovered that Moses had been initiated into the rites of Osiris, and he learned what those rites were like.

And he tells about it all with the most soulful.

Strange Tribes

Daring Traveler Finds Them Living In Shadow Of Civilization

CARL N. TAYLOR liked to explore the odd corners of the earth and he finally paid for it with his life. He was killed a few months ago while investigating the rites of the Penitentes in the southwest. Before that, he had explored the a man with an eye to see things and a pen to describe them.

"Odyssey of the Islands," in other words, is a corking good book. It covers Mr. Taylor's extensive wanderings in the Philippine archipelago; it is illustrated with some interesting photographs, and it is written intelligently.

There are odd things to be seen in the Philippines. Mr. Taylor stumbled on an americal tribulation.

There are odd things to be seen in the Philippines. Mr. Taylor stumbled on an amazing tribe of sea gypsies—people who live from birth to death on rickety little boats, eternally wandering lazily from island to island, supporting themselves by fishing, coming ashore so seldom that it makes them dizzy to walk on dry land. Strangely enough, he found them poor sailors, subject to seasickness, and remarkably incompetent lisherment.

and defy white civilization in all its forms. Neither Spanish nor American power has ever made much headway with them; nor, says Mr. Taylor, is it at all likely that the new Filipino Commonweath will have any more success in taming them.

They are intractable savages and it is almost impossible for troops to get at them.

Upon the islands as a group, however, Mr. Taylor finds that America has left an indelible impression. The Filipinos actually are larger and more robust than they were before Dewey fought at Manila. They have more than doubled their numbers since then. They owe America a good deal, and this writer believes that they are not unmindful of the debt. All in all, "Odyssey of the Islands" is first-rate

"Arabian" music played by an orchestra of Arabians on native instruments, in connection with color filming of Robert Hichen's novel and play, "The Garden of Allah," and "visual" music in color on the screen are two new Hollywood enterprises. This venture is in the hands of Oscar Fischinger, a European, who designs movement with accompanying music in dots and lines, circles and columns, blocks and balls, streaks and wings of light, which swoop, swirl, dance, quiver, diminish, grow and glow. "Fischinger may see a heavy drum beat as an orange sphere sho a purple tunnel or the music of many violins as a battalion of yellow lines converging into a crescendo of red rings," observes The New York World-Telegram. The critics say "his shifting color patterns are 'abstractions," and, like surrealists, cubists and futurists, only a couple of jumps away from the booby hatch."

It is just the description that Lady Astor, pointedly though indirectly, is said to have applied to one of her sons.

The Viscountess Astor had too many children. The group includes four sons and a daughter. The famous member of the Langhorine sisters of Virginia had so many that she did not know how to entertain them and continue her other interests.

But she went on being a companionable mother and winning honors in Parliament, and everyone thought she ma: ged, on the whole, quite nicely. The youngsters had their spinach juice, their teeth straightened or whatever else they needed. They were proud of their mother.

"If had known as much as I do now, I should not have had you at all."

After all, whether or not the son was justified in his belief, and even being justified, should have mentioned it, is not part of our interest. For a mother, a famous one, to tell a son that only lack of knowledge let him in on the universe, is rather crude.

is rather crude.

Certainly we do not contend for one minute that a parent should make himself a living sacrifice on the altar of a child's needs. Parents are people, with personalities, and children are going to be far prouder of those who function well in their community, far more strengthened and inspired by them, than they are of those parents who become door mate against which small muddy shoes from baseball diamonds and slim dancing pumps from school parties, are wiped.

PARENT ACCEPTS RESPONSIBILITIES TO CHILD A PARENT, having brought a child into the world, has certain responsibilities in regard to it. No child ever was born of his volition. The old plea of little boys and girls who think they are being mistreated—"I didn't ask to be born!" are being mistreated—"I didn't ask to be born!"— has a fair amount of truth in it. To make a child, even a grown one who no longer needs the parental affection as a protecting cloak, feel that the house could have been managed better with one less bowl of porridge on the table, one less in the nursery, is starkly cruel.

Viscountess Astor has one contention with which we agree. She states that children, in the which we agree. She states that children, in the early years, are quite as well cared for in nursery schools as in the home. Undoubtedly, as children learn the mechanics of living, this is true. If a parent must decide which part of his life to give to his children, the child will profit more by a ess after seven. Even here we run into snag. The affection which develops later may not be as adhesive as that which would have come

Only, maybe it is better for parents and children not to be so close. Maybe they smother each other, Maybe a friendship development is the wise course.

There are plenty of problems in human relationships which have to be worked out before the family will function as a contented, happy

Bridal Veil

Originally Worn to Fend Off Demons; Wedding Customs Go 'Way Back

THE ANCIENT CUSTOM of veiling a bride was once a trick to mislead mischievous demons.

Thus Prof. Ludwig Deubner of the Berlin
University, explains bridal veils, which in ancient times were more enveloping and mysterious than the airy veil of a modern bride.

Fear of demons, it appears, plagued the ancient Greeks in a fashion reminiscent of the fairy-tale fear of the wicked fairy who always turned up for trouble at weddings and christenings.

Describing lengths to which wedding parties would go to foil demons. Frof. Deubner said that brides in Sparta were dressed in men's clothing. The Spartan maid, dressed like a man and with her hair shorn, was shut up in a dark room to await her bridegroom's arrival and a dramatic

Pasteur In Movies Mail Order Crooks

THOUSANDS have seen the motion picture portraying the life and work of Louis Pasteur and have thrilled to the great drama of science in the making. The film has now reached London and the British scientific journal, Nature, has appraised it with an appreciative yet critical eye. Paul Muni's performance wins warm praiset for an admirable portrayal of not only the great Pasteur's passionate ardor in research, dauntless courage in facing opposition and sympathy for human suffering, but also his abruptness, outbursts of temper, and fits of despondency.

The Nature review therefore considers it "all the more regrettable that the film should contain many historical errors."

HOME TALENT IT IS a pushover swindle for the racketeers, because it appeals to the most vulnerable part of human nature. Agatha, facing herself in the long mirror at home in Smallburg, detects a strong similarity between her face and figure and Carole Lombard's. And the advertisement reads, "You Have as Much Personality as the Stars. Let Us Help You Develop It." By the same virtue, Edgar, who has been reading adventure fiction by the pulp, has taken to day-dreaming at the village dock about a pirate tale with gore galore. Straightaway Edgar puts its whimsies down on paper, in laborious longhand and in terrible prose. Then he sends it off to the literary vulture who circulates the axiom that "Authors Are Made, Not Born." Or consider Archie, the grocer's helper at the corner store, who is the undisputed poet laureate of the village. His boss, in fact, thought so well of his apprentice's work that he once framed and hung the one about "Give Your Love to Mother, Better Pal Than Any Other." Many times, the villagers urged Archie to go to New York and sell his verses to those song-writin' fellows. Then one day Archie saw an ad soliciting original lyrics. THE NAKED truth of the matter happens to be that Broadway hasn't enough beautiful show-girls to go around. And that musical comedy showmen are setting a high price on pulchritude. And earlier this year, Earl Carroll jammed the Winter Garden with would-be beauties who wanted to be in the "Vanities." Winning Power Over Steam

If all men of the earth set to work together, they could not supply so much power as comes from steam. Steam drives most ships crossing the seas and most locomotives pulling trains over the land. In thousands of factories, steam power turns the wheels.

factories, steam power turns the wheels.

Steam comes from water made hot by fire. If we take enough heat away from water, it turns to ice, which is solid. If we add enough heat, water turns to steam, which is classed as a gas.

People boiled water in ancient times, but few of them knew that anything could be done with the steam which came from it. There was a bright minded Greek who played with steam power, if he did no more. His name was Hero, and he lived in northern Egypt. More than 2,000 years ago. Hero and his helpers found how to make "steam fountains" and also how to use ateam in other ways. They did not make it do work of much importance, however.

Many centuries passed after that with no record of steam being employed to do anything. Then, not much more than 300 years ago, men in Europe began to take notice of steam again. They made machines which were turned by steam power, but which did little, if any, useful work.

"Can you repair this pump so I may show my students how it works?"
It was a professor speaking, a professor at the University of Glasgow. In his hands he held a model of Newcomen's steam pump.

The person to whom he spoke was a young Scotsman by the name of James Watt. He was in his middle-twenties, and had a shop on the university grounds. Part of his work was to make, or repair, models of machines for students.

Watt had to do work of other kinds, but his thoughts kept going back to the steam pump. It did not seem to him to be good enough. The platon moved when pressed by the steam, but it moved for only a short-while. Then there was need to wait for more steam before it would run again.

"Why not find a way to keep it nning smoothly, without those halts for steam to come up again?"

he asked himself.
Indeed, why not? The problem was to find how to do it. From time to time, Watt gave further study to the model. He saw that much of the heat in the steam heat in the steam was wasted when it warmed a cool cylinder. Then came the flash of an idea, and in telling about it we may use his

"I had gone to take a walk on a fine Sabbath afternoon, early in 1765. I had entered the green by the gate at the foot of Charlotte Street, and had passed the old washing-house. I was thinking upon the engine when the idea came into my mind that steam would rush into a vacuum. If a communication were made between the cylinder and an exhausted vessel, the steam would rush into it, and might be there condensed without cooling the cylinder."

This idea led Watt to build a new model, and great was his joy when, he found it worked better than Newcomen's pump. The months passed, and he kept adding one thing after another to make a more smooth-running engine. In the year 1769, Watt took out his first patent—for a steam-engine which was the best known up to that time. To prove his claims, he used a small model. He did not have enough money to build an engine of full size.

In the hope of raising money, Watt went to John Roebuck, head of an iron-foundry, and said to him, "If you will be my partner, and will pay the cost of building engines to put on the market, you may have two-thirds of the profits."

John Roebuck said that he was willing to be water parties, it is have two-thirds of the profits.

As it turned out, no profits came to him. His company went bankrupt partly because of the sums spent in trying to build a steam-engine along the lines of Watt's ideas. One trouble was about the large cylinders—Watt and Roebuck aid not have the right machines to give them an even "bore."

Lemons Are

The lemon is a cousin of the orange and is another important citrus fruit. Like the orange, the lemon is composed of carpels or sec-tions filled with tiny juice sacks. However, these carpels are packed into the skin to form an egg-shaped fruit of yellow color and acid flavor.

Lemon trees have foliage that is a lighter green in color than the orange, although they, too, are evergreen. These trees grow from ten to twenty feet in height, and a single tree has been known to produce 3,000 fruits in a year.

This large production is due to the fact that the lemon tree never takes a vacation but blossoms, grows and ripens its fruit the year around, with buds, flowers and fruit in process of development often present on the tree at the same time. California can thus ship to market fresh lemons as well as oranges, every day in the year.

Lemon blossoms are much like the orange flowers, except that the backs of the white petals are tinged with purple. It requires about nine months from the setting of the fruit until it is ready to pick.

The lemon requires a some what warmer home than the orange. So the larger plantings of this fruit are in southern California.

The Lake Swimming Hole

THE OTHER afternoon after lunch when we were having our rest Betty said: "Listen to the row down at the beach. 'Aren't they saying the craziest things."

So we all started listening, and then we decided to write down the things that were being said. There were about twenty kids at the public diving float and they sure were having a swell time. It was one of those hot days that just seemed to raise blisters on your skin.

Here are some of the things we heard coming from the raft, and perhaps you'll get a kick out of reading them:

"I was the first one ducked."

"Naw, you weren't."
"Ouch! Oh, my stomach!" (Somebody dove in belly-flop and you could hear the smack.)

"Try the other one now."

"Ow, gee, I got a mouthful that time."

"Let's play follow the leader."
"Oh, yeah."

"Oh, where did my ball go?" "Why don't you swim with your mouth under water? That's not the way to swim under water.'

'Tis so. I was right under." "Ha, ha, haw!"

"Margaret, Margaret, Margaret, look!"
"Here I go, kids." (Another belly-flop.)

"I do overhand, why don't you try it? What do you do dog paddle for ?"

"Aw, keep going."
"Hi-ya, kids!"

"Try 'er again from there, boys."

"O.K. Come on up now. "Are you kids playing tag?"
"Phyllis, wait, wait!"

"Look at my feet!"

"Your bathing cap is undone." "Where is it, on your stomach, or where?"

"I thought your cap was another ball." "I was pushed under by some dirty guy."
"That's a fat way of doing it."

"Aw, don't hold your nose.

"Oh, say, this is lots of fun." "I'm going to do a big explosion." "Boy, it's cold out here; must be one of those springs under

Then four boys about ten years old came down to the beach and launched an old flat-bottomed boat that had holes in it.

Painted on its bow was "Violet B." Here's what they had to say: "Here comes the Queen Mary! Pull her back, boys! Aw, don't pull her too hard or she'll come to pieces! You'll have to bail her out now." The Queen Mary sinks and the four boys stand on her in triumph, then one falls off the side and the boat comes up sideways and the rest spill into the water. Then they bail out the Queen Mary once more and repeat the process of sinking her, but before that there's an argument, as follows: "I'm the first mate."

"I'm the captain," and he pushed the first mate overboard. "We've got to make Vancouver by tonight."
"Darn!"

"Man overboard!" * * A brother and sister arrive to join the crowd. The brother runs and jumps off the springboard, but his sister likes to wade out first and duck rather than dive in. The brother sneaks up behind his sister and splashes her. She gets mad.

"Aw, quit it, Bob," she shouts, and grabs for his hair and pulls it.

The boy's father calls out: "Hey, son, quit that!" But he has his clothes on and can't do anything about it. And then a lady arrives with a daughter she is going to teach to swim, and she talks this way: "All right, swim from here to dry land. I'll stay beside you. I'm not afraid, come on here! Now come around this way; that's fine; keep going. Oh, don't splash so; bring your arm

Then the girls head went under water and she got a noseful, and that was the end of the swimming lesson. A man arrives on the float and the little girls all get in a huddle. Then I heard one of them whisper: "That's the man that was up in the house last year making love."

And all this happened in about fifteen minutes at our swimming hole. Perhaps I'll listen in another day and see if I can get some more funny sayings.

The solution to the problem lies with the metallurgist and physicist. The metallurgist must find a metal that will 'stand the gaff' and the physicist must devise a method of predicting accurately how much the metal will 'creep' when in service hour.

Islands rise from ocean bottoms as s result of the slow flow or movement of rock, a phenomena common to all viscous or plastic materials," explains Doctor A. Nadal, a research physicist. "Of far greater immediate importance is the similar flow of steel which is used in present-day machinery.

"This flow or 'creep' is surprisingly similar in rock and metal. Even the formula which fits the 'creep' movement is almost alike for both materials. Discoveries in the field of metals may interpret parallel behavior in behaviour of rocks and vice

"The time element is the important difference in the two problems. Geologists are interested in rock 'creep' that takes place over millions of years; physicists in the 'creep' of steel only for the usual life of machinery, ten or twenty years.

"Research into the physical laws governing metal's 'creep' has become necessary because engineers are ever designing larger and more efficient machines such as in large steam turbines with the result that the metal in the machines is called upon work at higher temperatures, at higher pressures, at faster speed and with smaller clearances between adjacent parts.

"This evolution to more efficient machines and more exacting requirements of metals comprising them is particularly evident among manufacturers of steam turbines and steam thollers, and of cracking stills used in oil refineries.

"Unfortunately, ordinary metals "Clearance of one-thousandth of high temperature and a steady pull tends to stretch or "cree" in the state of the pull. For instance, the metal blades of a steam turbine potor are continually stretching, although only an infinitesimal amount, while they are being whirled around at the rate of 3,600 revolutions per minute in superheated steam.

"Clearance of one-thousandth of an inch is permitted in these high temperature and a steady more than the allotted clearance, pull tends to stretch or "creen" in the method developed must be accurate and reasonably rapid to be of any value. If the method is too stow, it will likely be used in everyday tests. Engineers look forward to the time when fifteen minutes will be considered reasonably rapid."

Doctor Nadai points out the difficuently which faces a physicist who attempts to predict in a short test the finitesima! "creep" of metals.

This means that in order to predict by means of a fifteen minute test, the problem of the pull. Tomato Growers Are Warned Against Touching Potatoes

A NIMALS can catch plant diseases. Recent experiments at the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Saanichton, have proved that chickens can be infected with plant virus, submicroscopic organism and cause of untold damage to crops all over the world.

However, though they did not become ill. This was explained by the fact that the before going into the green virus in their bodies. From one discovery the pathologist progressed to another. Because this inbelievably small organism which causes such terrific destruction, it is reasonable to believe with so tiny an object, contact alone is not necessary to transfer it to another plant. If you have eaten infected fruit and vegetables why should not breathing be sufficient to spread virus diseases? Already tomato growers have been warned not to handle tobacco or smoke cigarettes in their greenhouses as, according to the Saanichton laboratory, "50 per cent of all samples of causing untoid damage to tomato crops."

The farmer has no way of telling whether he is carrying virus or not. If he was careful not to touch any diseased plants it would not make diseased.

tified tomato virus disease is caused by a latent virus of potatoes, in other words, a virus of potatoes that does no harm.

But let us get back to the laboratory and follow Dr. Newton and H. I. Edwards in their experiments.

The anti-virus set up by the chickens, however, is specific or, to put it more plainly, it will only kill a certain type of virus, in this case potato virus, and not all plant viruses. The significance of this should be realized as it was the premise upon which the identification of the to-mato virus was made.

In order to find out whether diseased potatoes were a menace to the health of animals, three white Wyandottes were inoculated under the wings with potato virus. The birds were infected but showed no long of tomatoes. They got the same long of their experiments sometimes co-operate, but the pa som

Subsequent investigation showed that the new tomato virus disease which was called streak "X" was the virulent form of a latent potato virus. All potatoes according to the Saanichton scientists, harbor a latent virus that does no harm to potatoes but apparently can exist in a very severe form as far as tomatoes are concerned. Thus potatoes are a menace to tomatoes, and if the grower wants to experiment, he can rub a little of the juice from a potato plant on a tomato plant. In two weeks the on a tomato plant. In two wee tomato plant will begin to look very sick and show black streaking on the leaves.

The severe character of streak "X" has raised the possibility of it being a combination of tobacco and potato viruses, as these tiny organism sometimes co-operate, but the pathological laboratory has definitely proved that the damage was done by a single virus belonging to the

a very important question: How much seed should he sow per acre? On his decision may depend the dif-ference between an abundant and a ference between an abundant and a passable crop. In order to assist the farmer, Dr. E. S. Hopkins, Dominion Field Husbandman, has prepared a booklet under the appropriate title "How Much Do You Sow Per Acre" which has just been issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. In discussing the rates of seeding grain and other farm crops, due emphasis is given to the varying climatic, soil, and other conditions peculiar to different regions. Based largely on long-time experiments, the rates represent the findings of recognized authorities on farm practice.

There is possibly more difference of opinion regarding the rates to seed hay and pasture crops than there is about the rates of seeding other commonly grown farm crops, states Dr. Hopkins, In the main, two or three pounds difference in the rates of seeding meadows or pasture will not make any great change in the yields. seeding meadows or pasture will not make any great change in the yields, but it is certainly unwise to run the chance of smaller yields just to save a dollar or so per acre on the seed. made agricultural history by yielding 74 tons 800 pounds of mangolds to the acre. By selling the crop at $10 a ton to three farmers, Mr. Barnes realized the extraordinary sum of $750 for an acre of produce.

"There's no secret to it," Mr. Barnes laughed, Just before he had said he would get from seven and a half to ten pounds per plant. "My neighbor never grew a tomato in his life, but he has got just as good as life, but he has got just as good as have this year." However, Mr. Barnes later admitted that his neighbor had followed his instructions to the letter.

The new rugs show a marked tendency toward modernism. It is there even in the most conservative patterns. Often the strictly 1936 note is shown, not in a pattern at all, but in an unusual weave or texture.

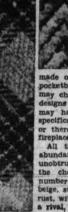

There are rugs that copy tweed and homespun effects. There are others, woven of novelty yarns to give a pebbly surface—practical because it defies the marks even of theildren and dogs. Plaids, some of them authentic reproductions of celebrated Scotch tartans, are very much in the forefront of rug design.

Things Remain Old And Unchanged In Studio Of Great Comic, While Charlie Works Serenely On

New Picture By PAUL HARRISON

IFE DRONES on at the Chaplin Studio about as it has for the last eighteen years-pleasantly. Old retainers comprising a skeleton staff putter aimlessly around the offices and shops. Teddy, an overstuffed mongrel, sleeps in the studio street. Topaz, Mr. Chaplin's personal eat, has dozed in front of the same rat-hole for months.

Alfred Reeves, chipper, nearly sixty, and still pretty "Briddish," goes about his duties-whatever they are-as the concern's general manager. He was manager of the repertoire company in which Chaplin made his American debut in 1910. Henry Bergman, about sixty-five, stooge, friend, and elephantine small-part player, drops in now and then to see whether there is any stooging to be done. There is not.

The actor used to make something of a fetish of sartorial freedom, and thought nothing of appearing at uppity parties in soiled ducks and a sweatshirt. His signal triumph was the evening he introduced the combination of sweatshirt and tuxedo.

MR. JACK OAKIE is a professional pal. Socially he may be shunned by a great number of Hollywoodsmen who cherish their dignity, but within the actual confines of the flicker business he is a very valuable fellow to have around. "Golden Oakie." as he sometimes is called, is a pal by his own choice. It is a matter of career-perpetuation. He declares that he never will play a lead in any picture, but is perfectly willing to be the friend—the cinematic friend, anyway—of the leading man. Leading men come and go, being juveniles yesterday and character-extras tomorrow. But all leading men must have pals.

"Sturdy Oakie." as some of his friends know him, is not one of those sour-puss individuals who believe that comedy should be "saved for the performance." Nor is he a clown who wants to play Pagifacci, or a buffoon thwarted from a high destiny of Hamlet.

Only one things does he share in common with all other actors—a belief that he would make a very good director.
